

Village Cinemas entered the Sydney market when it purchased and, subsequently, twinned the Vogue Cinema Double Bay. Renamed the Village Twin Double Bay, the complex opened on Saturday, the 29th December, 1973 with Don't Look Now and The Hireling. The cinema only screened one 70mm film - a reissue of 2001: a Space Odyssey. The chain subsequently opened a second twin cinema in the Sydney suburb of Blacktown. Incorporated into the Westpoint Shopping Centre and 35mm equipped, the Village Twin Blacktown opened on the 22nd March 1974 with Alvin Purple and Enter the Dragon. This was followed by the Village Cinema City triplex in the Sydney CBD, which opened on the 25th April 1974 with Mame, Magnum Force and Malizia. The latter film closed a week later and was replaced with Blazing Saddles. Village Cinema City was located at 545 Street Sydney and was the first multiplex to open in the Sydney CBD. The three-screen multiplex was fitted out with Bauer projectors. Cinema 1, the largest (with a seating capacity of 650), was fitted out with two Bauer (70mm capable) projectors. The other two cinemas had seating capacities of 450 and 300 respectively. The first 70mm presentations opened a "Summer Festival of 70mm Musicals", which were followed by a reissue of 2001: a Space Odyssey. The 70mm season of 2001: A Space Odyssey, consisted of unknown 35mm and 70mm spool numbers due to waterdamaged of the 70mm print received from Brisbane. A 35mm print was later substituted into the season. Village Cinema City was expanded to five screens on Friday, the 19th March 1976, with The Story of O opening in Cinema 4 and Love and Death in Cinema 5. The two new auditoria were constructed on the southern side of the existing complex. The smaller auditoria seated 250 and 200 respectively. A sixth screen was added some time after the closure of the Village Ascot theatre [05/02/86]. Village Cinema City closed on the 5th May, 2000 and was demolished – paving the way for construction of the Meriton Tower (residential apartments) and Skyview Shopping Plaza. After the multiplex's closure, Village Cinemas and Hoyts Cinemas merged as one exhibitor in the refurbished Hoyts Centre, which included an additional four screens, after the two large 70mm equipped auditoriums, Cinema 3 and 7, were reconfigured into six smaller (35mm) auditoriums. This rebuild was achieved with each of the two large auditoriums split in two and a third screen positioned in the area previously occupied by the original stage and screen. In 2002 the Greater Union George, then comprising six screens, and the Hoyts Centre's eleven screens merged into a single, seventeen screen multiplex - renamed the George Street Cinemas.

Please Note — With a second screen added at Village Cinema City capable for 70mm with the release of The Right Stuff, it has not been possible to confirm whether Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Gremlins, Mad Max Beyond Thunderdome, The Mission and Who Framed Roger Rabbit screened in 70mm after the move over due to the absence of cinema numbers from the newspaper directories. Our research for Australia in 70mm has found no tabloid advertising or sessions directory promoting the films in 70mm. Accordingly, the film titles and season details will remain highlighted in BLUE cells until confirmed either way.
